Fully vaccinated people don't need to wear a mask, but there are lots of reasons why people may wear a mask

- ▶ They're not vaccinated against COVID-19.
- ▶ They are immunosuppressed because they're receiving treatment for an illness and are not sure how well the vaccine works with immunosuppression.
- ▶ They are a caretaker for someone who is vulnerable.
- ▶ They have young children who aren't eligible to get a COVID-19 vaccine yet.
- ▶ They are waiting until the third trimester of pregnancy to get the vaccine.
- ▶ They have allergies that are lessened by wearing a mask.
- ▶ They have been exposed to someone with suspected or confirmed COVID-19 and don't want to take any chances of spreading it.
- ▶ They are still nervous about catching COVID-19.
- ▶ They know that wearing a mask protects themselves and others.
