Methodology

University of Mississippi

Students must complete a Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA) to verify eligibility requirements are met under Section 484 in Title IV of the Higher Education Act of 1965, as amended (HEA).

In compliance with federal directives, the University of Mississippi prioritized students with exceptional need as evidenced by Pell Grant eligibility.

To request emergency financial aid grant funding under the HEERF II – CRRSAA, students applied requesting aid. Students indicated on the application whether awarded funds were to be distributed to them directly or to be applied against amounts owed to the university with any excess amounts remaining being refunded directly to the student.

Grants of $2,500 per qualifying student were awarded.

University of Mississippi Medical Center

University of Mississippi Medical Center met with Institutional administration and determined programs of study that had the greatest disruption due to campus closure and allocated funds to those programs in tier one. Students must complete a Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA) to verify eligibility requirements are met under Section 484 in Title IV of the Higher Education Act of 1965, as amended (HEA).

For subsequent funds, CRRSAA funding is being distributed via a student application process while the ARP funds will be distributed based on ISIR completions including awards to all students with a 0-300 EFC to ensure compliance with the needy student requirements of the act.

As many of you know, the US congress passed the Cares Act on March 27, 2020 which included funds for students who experienced expenses related to COVID-19 disruption of their educational programs. The University of Mississippi received $8,321,319 for this purpose. Of this, UMMC was allocated $349,200. The medical center received no money directly. There were several options on how these funds might be distributed for greatest relief. Three cohorts of students were identified whose programs were most disrupted, completion delayed, and expenses incurred. These were the D4's, PT3's, and accelerated BSN students in the Oxford program. Each FAFSA eligible student in these cohorts received $2000.00 to defray these real-time, unplanned-for expenses. All other UMMC students have the opportunity to apply for reimbursement of documented COVID-19 related expenses by making a claim for a portion of the remaining funds through the Office of Student Financial Aid intranet web portal given below.
